

Maggie when she came to CARE

Dear Lynne-

We just wanted you to have a couple of photos of Maggie-nificent now that her fur has grown out. She is really a cute dog, with more brown spots than you can see in these shots. When I asked the vet what she thought her pedigree might be, she said "white". So I suppose we'll never know her lineage, and how she was treated before. But she seems very well adjusted to her new home with us. We take her to our cabin in the Sierras every couple of weeks and she loves it there. When we start packing the car to return to sunnyvale, she hides somewhere in the house or the yard. She loves to go to the local dog park, but unlike every other dog there, never potties. Interesting that she has no inclination to mark her territory.

We are happy to have her in our lives and are grateful to you and to CARE for the excellent care you provided for her. She makes us laugh many times a day and she puts up with us pretty well.

Take good care -

Maggie's new family

Maggie at her new cabin in the snow!

